Battlefront 2.Pleasant Island (Maine) Pleasant Island is an island in Casco Bay in the town of Casco, Maine. It is also known as East Pleasant Island. The island is approximately long and wide. It is the largest island in Casco Bay and is separated from Baker Island to the west by a tidal strait. The Massachusetts line to the south separates it from the mainland. The island has a number of stone chimneys and cisterns, some of which are open for water access. The island was owned by the Kingston Company, a timber company, until 1905 when it was sold to Levi Smith for $5,000. A group of women occupied the island for three months, but was forcibly removed. The island is now uninhabited and in a state of disrepair. The island was considered by William Jenkins to be the ideal site for the American Siege of Boston, which was planned during the British occupation of Boston in 1775. The island was purchased by the United States government in 1812 for use as a "city" to house slaves during the U.S. Civil War. The island was converted into a military base for the Union Army.

Between March 1861 and May 1862, a series of fortifications were built on the island. In 1867, the U.S. government moved to Quarrel's Point on the opposite end of the island, which today contains the Fort

Knox Naval Weapons Station and the United States Army Aviation Support Facility. Fort Bayard In April 1861, the U.S. Army constructed the first
